BACKGROUND

As part of our mission to prepare for emergencies, public health proactively develop and formalize relationships and procedures to effectively address communicable disease outbreaks and other public health threats in Clark County and the region.

Public Health officials work with hospitals, emergency management, government officials, first responders, schools, businesses along with many other community partners to put together response plans. In preparing for any worse case scenario, our Response Plans include establishing Point of Distribution sites (PODs) in an event that would require large portions of the population to obtain medication or immunizations. Facility use agreements with our emergency preparedness partners allow access to medication and immunization when required.
