

CLARK COUNTY
STAFF REPORT

DEPARTMENT: The Arthur D. Curtis Children's Justice Center (CJC)

DATE: July 28, 2014

REQUEST:

That Board of Commissioners authorizes the Professional Service Contract between the City of Camas and the Children's Justice Center (CJC) for forensic interviewing services when there is a suspicion of a child abuse crime within the Camas City jurisdiction.

CHECK ONE: X Consent CAO

BACKGROUND

The City of Camas is not included in the CJC Interlocal Agreement and has recently decided to join other smaller city jurisdictions outside of the city of Vancouver in utilizing CJC's forensic interviewer and the center facility for suspected crimes against children within their jurisdictions. This is important to ensure that all children who reside in Clark County have access to the comprehensive and collaborative response that CJC provides from the initial interview on. Without this contract, CJC does not know about, or are involved with children in the city of Camas jurisdiction until a charging decision is made, so their children do not have access to CJC's child-centered setting, video recording, collaborative interview observation, access to a civilian forensic interviewer and parent outreach at the onset. For these reason, the City of Camas seeks to pay an hourly fee for the use of CJC's center and forensic interviewer.

COMMUNITY OUTREACH

A long-term effort by the CJC Board of Directors has been in process for years to bring all law enforcement jurisdictions to partner with CJC to ensure that all children have access to CJC's comprehensive response as early as possible when a crime has been committed to a child and to unify our coordinated response system countywide.

BUDGET AND POLICY IMPLICATIONS

The fee within this contract agreement will be paid to CJC by the City of Camas on an hourly fee-for-service basis, which will generate funding to absorb additional workload involved in this service agreement.

FISCAL IMPACTS
