Learn about Complete Neighborhoods

A healthy community has neighborhoods with a well-rounded offering of daily goods and services that can be reached within a comfortable walking distance. This includes convenient access to parks, community facilities, schools, libraries, and other shops and services. Having convenient access to these places promotes physical activity, reduces reliance on automobiles, and can improve neighborhood safety.

Rebecca Kennedy, Long Range Planning Manager with the City of Vancouver, and Elizabeth Decker, Land Use Planner and Founder of JET Planning, will discuss their experiences working with local jurisdictions in creating more complete neighborhoods.
